List of United States cities by population

The following is a list of the most populous incorporated places of the United States. As defined by the United States Census Bureau, an "incorporated place" includes a variety of designations, including city, town, village, borough, and municipality.[1] A few exceptional Census Designated Places (CDPs) are also included in the Census Bureau's listing of incorporated places.[2] Consolidated city-counties represent a distinct type of government that includes the entire population of a county, or county equivalent. Some consolidated city-counties, however, include multiple incorporated places. This list presents only that portion (or "balance") of such consolidated city-counties that are not a part of another incorporated place.

This list refers only to the population of individual municipalities within their defined limits; the populations of other municipalities considered suburbs of a central city are listed separately, and unincorporated areas within urban agglomerations are not included. Therefore, a different ranking is evident when considering U.S. metropolitan area populations.

The ten most populous cities of the United States
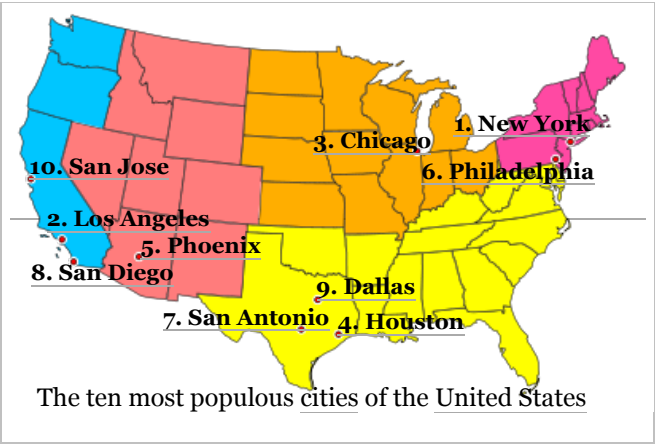

The following table lists the 311 incorporated places in the United States with a population of at least 100,000 on July 1, 2017, as estimated by the United States Census Bureau. A city is displayed in bold if it is a state or federal capital, and in italics if it is the most populous city in the state. Five states—Delaware, Maine, Vermont, West Virginia and Wyoming—do not have cities with populations of 100,000 or more. The table below contains the following information:

1. The city rank by population as of July 1, 2017, as estimated by the United States Census Bureau[3]
2. The city name[3]
3. The name of the state in which the city lies[3]
4. The city population as of July 1, 2017, as estimated by the United States Census Bureau[3]
5. The city population as of April 1, 2010, as enumerated by the 2010 United States Census[3]
6. The city percent population change from April 1, 2010, to July 1, 2017
7. The city land area as of January 1, 2016[4]
8. The city population density as of July 1, 2016 (residents per unit of land area)[4]
9. The city latitude and longitude coordinates[4]

Puerto Rico

The following table lists the five municipalities (municipios) of Puerto Rico with a population greater than 100,000 on July 1, 2017, as estimated by the United States Census Bureau.

The table below contains the following information:

1. The municipio rank by population as of July 1, 2017, as estimated by the United States Census Bureau[36]
2. The municipio[36]
3. The municipio population as of July 1, 2017, as estimated by the United States Census Bureau[36]
4. The municipio population as of April 1, 2010, as enumerated by the 2010 United States Census[36]
5. The municipio percent population change from April 1, 2010, to July 1, 2017
6. The municipio land area as of January 1, 2016[4]
7. The municipio population density as of July 1, 2017 (residents per land area)[4]
8. The municipio latitude and longitude coordinates

Census-designated places

The following table lists U.S. census-designated places (CDPs) with populations of at least 100,000 according to the 2010 Census. A CDP is a concentration of population identified by the United States Census Bureau for statistical purposes. CDPs are delineated for each decennial census as the statistical counterparts of incorporated places such as cities, towns and villages. CDPs are populated areas that lack separate municipal government, but which otherwise physically resemble incorporated places. Unlike the incorporated cities in the main list, the US Census Bureau does not release annual population estimates for CDPs.

The table below contains the following information:

1. The city
2. The state
3. The city population as of April 1, 2010, as enumerated by the 2010 United States Census
4. The city population as of April 1, 2000, as enumerated by the 2010 United States Census

Cities formerly over 100,000 people

The following table lists U.S. cities that, in past censuses, have had populations of at least 100,000 but have since decreased beneath this threshold or have been consolidated with or annexed into a neighboring city.

The table below contains the following information:

1. Name of city
2. Name of state
3. The city population as of July 1, 2017, as estimated by the United States Census Bureau[3]
4. The city's peak population based on highest official enumeration recorded by the Census (and the year of that particular Census)
5. The numeric decline in population from its peak Census count to the most recent Census estimate in 2017.
6. The percent decline in population from its peak Census count to the most recent Census estimate in 2017.
7. Any additional notes of significant importance.

Towns in New England, while incorporated on a level similar to cities in other states, are considered minor civil divisions by the Census Bureau and are not included in its list of incorporated places. A detailed discussion on this subject can be found at New England town#Census treatment of the New England town system.

2. The State of Hawaiʻi has no incorporated municipalities other than the City and County of Honolulu, which comprises the entire Island of Oʻahu. In accordance with Hawaiian law, the United States Census Bureau defines the state's "cities" and "towns" as Census Designated Places (CDPs). The Census Bureau defines the Urban Honolulu CDP as the portion of the City and County of Honolulu that is coextensive with the Judicial District of Honolulu. The Urban Honolulu CDP is what is generally thought of as the "city" of Honolulu, and its population is used here and in other population comparisons. The Urban Honolulu CDP is currently the most populous Census Designated Place in the United States. The Honolulu, HI Metropolitan Statistical Area comprises the entire City and County of Honolulu.
